

I wanted to give you an update on Sarah! First of all, we are SO BLESSED with her progress! Her teacher told me the other day she needs to remind Sarah to be quiet during work!! She's doing great overall!! I keep thinking back to when she was 8 or so weeks old not knowing what the future held! (and yes, I cried when her teacher told me she was talking a ton and asocial butterfly!) Every chance I had I'd move my tongue all around for her, tell her everything I was doing (I still get stares in the stores for doing it) and do the facial exercises. And here she is 4 years later writing her name, drawing pictures that are recognizable, and having to be reminded that work is done quietly, not while you're chit-chatting with your friends or singing songs!!

Your line of work makes such a great impact on people's lives! As a parent of a previous patient, your impact on our family's life has been huge! You gave us hope (and taught us) when we had very little. I liken our experience with All for Kids to the instruction book that you never got when your child was born. All those sheets you gave us we kept and used with Andrew. We are very grateful to have worked with you all for the couple of years we were there! When I catch a glimpse of her playing on the playground with other kids, I think about you guys and how exciting it would be for you to see that, with no signs of previous nerve damage or facial paralysis of any sorts!

As they would say in the south, "Ya'll rock!"
